MINING MAN LOST UNITED VERDE BY ACCIDENT TO WIFE

The sudden relapse and death of the well-known mining engineer and authority, W. L. Cooper, in the Lost Pines district, Inyo county, California, last week, after an accident at the Bunker Hill mine, which has been putting on a production of about 100,000 tons of ore, is the latest and most interesting happening of thirty years ago.

Mr. Cooper, who has guided many big operators in their mining operations, had examined the United Verde property, decided for him to visit the mine, and secured an option, he told Mr. Morgan, the price being $50,000. Going to New York Mr. Cooper arranged for the money, his principal to come west to complete the details of the purchase and payment. Now came the accident that gave Senator Clark the chance to get the mine, and wealth which has followed its development, said in round figures to be now over forty millions of dollars. The buyer started on time from New York City prepared to make payment and to close the deal, and ample time had been allowed for him to visit the mine before concluding the purchase.

At Denver, the little god of chance, or fate, it may be, stepped in. A telegram caught him on the train telling of his wife being injured in a street car accident and calling him back at once. He returned by the next train, the accident resulted fatally, and before the matter of the mine purchase could be taken up again the option expired. Senator Clark, Mr. Cooper said, was on the spot, with his purchase money in gold promptly on the minute, and closed the purchase. That was thirty years ago, but Mr. Cooper never forgot the possibilities of the Jerome district, and it was in this conference that caused Mr. Morgan to examine with more than ordinary interest the possibilities of the United Verde Extension and the Mingo group properties, with the outcome that he is now heavily interested in both and with his associates committed to a program that means a great active enterprise.

The development of both into producing mines without delay. The Great Verde Extension has attracted the attention of more than one expert engineer because of its being in a direct line with the shafts of the United Verde, United Verde Extension, the Jerome Verde and the Dundee-Arizona, and the general belief among the technical and the practical miners that the trend of the ore bodies from the two big mines is directly to the Great Verde Extension. This point was brought out in court when it was testified that the United Verde Extension had acquired its eastern holdings because it was believed that the trend of ore bodies was in that direction. These eastern holdings of the United Verde Extension adjoin the Great Verde Extension, which is directly east of the Mingo group and adjoins the Great Verde Extension on the east and south, and Walter Harvey Weed in recommending the development of the Mingo group called attention to this belief in the easterly trend of the ore bodies, also to the property being in a straight line with United Verde, the United Verde Extension and the Dundee-Arizona.

The section about the Great Verde Extension will soon be about the most active in Jerome. Immediately south and adjoining the Mingo group, Governor Oddie is preparing to develop the Jerome Del Monte, and right by is the Gadsden property, now working fifty-five men, putting down a shaft to 1000 feet with the usual dispatch that characterizes Calumet and Arizona development work.

Prominent mining engineers express the belief that the ore bodies on Great Verde Extension and the Mingo group will be reached at about a depth of 650 feet, which is several hundred feet nearer the surface than on the Verde Extension and the United Verde.

Once again the Jeffery Quad has demonstrated its ability to combat all sorts of opposition and work its way through mud and sand, over rocks and across country where there were no roads, and where even pleasure cars and horse-drawn light vehicles were stalled. It was declared that it was a hopeless task for any motor to attempt the trip, but the Jeffery did it, and not only once, but a number of times, in the rescue work of the government aviators who were lost in Lower California.

During the ten-day search for these two men, when the public at large was watching with unabated interest for some word of rescue, a two-ton Jeffery Quad truck was of material assistance to the government in conveying supplies and equipment to the camps of the searching parties below the line, and who, depending directly on the Quad's ability to push its way through and deliver to them the necessities for keeping them alive.

The Jeffery was driven by Curley Humfrey of Imperial valley, who, after his second trip, stated that the roads where they found them to travel on were next to impassable, due to the storms which had been raging throughout that section, and that in one place he saw an empty wagon mired in the mud, which had been abandoned because the horses could not pull it out.

Load Exceeds Capacity
Mr. Humfrey stated that on both of his trips the load carried was much heavier than the regular capacity of the truck, but because of the fact that the Quad drives, steers and brakes on all four wheels, he was able to get through, as one wheel of the truck was always able to get traction and pull where the other three were buried below the hub in soft mud.

The Jeffery also has the contract to bring back all supplies left over, now that the search is finished, and believes it will require about five trips in all to rescue all the extras for the aeroplanes, the aeroplane gasoline, mechanics, helpmeets and other supplies, and he is willing to undertake the rescue of the lost machine itself, believing that the Quad will go wherever it may be.

One For All, All For One
"Well, well, well, now what's the matter, little boy?"
"That er—Socialist feller over there speakin' went an' took the big ol' n'v wagon to stand on, an' he won't give it back."—Harper's.

NEW FIRESTONE BUILDING OPEN

"The finest and best equipped branch tire service building on the Pacific coast," is the description given the new Firestone branch in Los Angeles by W. L. Bailey, H. O. Wilcox and Harry Criswell, local Firestone dealers, upon their return here yesterday. They journeyed to Los Angeles as guests of the Firestone company to attend the dedication of the new building on Wednesday, January 31, which was officially designated as Firestone Day throughout the city. Five hundred other Firestone dealers throughout Southern California, Nevada, New Mexico and Arizona were also in attendance.

The celebration was equal to some of the best civic demonstrations held in Los Angeles," they declared. "And the most enjoyable of any we ever participated in. The company spared no trouble and expense in looking after our comfort and entertainment."

"But the new branch building was worthy of such an auspicious opening. It is complete in every detail. Built of stucco and reinforced concrete, equipped with the latest repairing machinery and having enlarged storing and shipping facilities, the opening of the new Firestone branch spells improvement service for dealers and tire users in this section."

Mayor Woodman, Chief of Police Butler and John S. Mitchell, president of the Chamber of Commerce, were among the prominent Los Angeles speakers at the banquet tendered the visitors in the ball room of the Alexandria hotel. Anita King, Paramount motion picture star, also spoke, relating her adventures on a transcontinental automobile tour on Firestones.

A Long Wait
Policeman (giving directions)—"After being ejected from the cinema, he was discovered with a large bouquet in his arms on the doorstep of the back entrance to the picture palace."
